PREFACE

The Directory of Labour Organizations is a compendium of data on union membership and unions, congresses and other labour organizations operating in the Province of New Brunswick.

Entries in the Directory are based on five parts:

- Part I contains statistical tables on union membership by size, industry, gender and congress affiliation;
- Part II lists international and national unions, as well as independent local organizations, either affiliated or unaffiliated to a central labour congress; and,
- Parts III - V contain the names of labour representatives, officials of the Central Labour Congresses, the New Brunswick Federation of Labour and officers of construction associations and building and construction trades councils in New Brunswick.

The information was obtained from a survey completed by representatives of various labour organizations and has a reference date of January 1, 2002.

We would like to express our appreciation to those representatives and organizations for their cooperation. Please call (506) 453-2261 for further information or assistance.

STATISTICS ON UNION MEMBERSHIP IN NEW BRUNSWICK
2002

SUMMARY

New Brunswick's unionized workforce saw a 0.3 % decrease in 2002. Membership stood at 82,497.

The year 2002 saw the implementation of the North American Industry Classification System (1997) replacing the Standard Industrial Classification System (1980) in our reporting system. The system was developed by statistical agencies to provide a common classification system on the industrial structure of Canada, the United States and Mexico. The North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) divides the economy into 20 sectors and further differentiates the economic activities in which businesses are engaged. Previously, industries were broken down into only 12 sectors thus limiting reporting new and technological advancements. Table VI of this publication reflects the NAICS classifications.

Note: Due to the absence of a regular employer-employee relationship, no statistical data relating to the Maritime Fishermen's Union has been included.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people, and the Department of Social Security (2000) has set out a strategy for the future of social care for older people.

The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the same range of health care services as younger people; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently for as long as possible; (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in decisions about their health care; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to live in the community for as long as possible.

The Department of Social Security (2000) has set out a strategy for the future of social care for older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the same range of social care services as younger people; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently for as long as possible; (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in decisions about their social care; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to live in the community for as long as possible.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 85 and over is projected to increase by 1.5 million by the year 2020 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop services to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people. The strategy is based on the principle that older people should be able to live in their own homes for as long as possible, and that health care should be provided in a way that is appropriate to their needs. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live in their own homes for as long as possible.
- Health care should be provided in a way that is appropriate to the needs of older people.
- Older people should be able to access health care services when they need them.
- Older people should be able to participate in decisions about their health care.
- Older people should be able to live a full and active life.

The strategy is based on the principle that older people should be able to live in their own homes for as long as possible. This means that health care services should be developed in a way that allows older people to remain in their own homes for as long as possible. This may involve providing services such as home care, day care, and residential care.

Health care should be provided in a way that is appropriate to the needs of older people. This means that health care services should be developed in a way that takes into account the physical, mental, and social needs of older people. This may involve providing services such as health promotion, prevention, and treatment.
